Dear Dr. Mah:

I'm very pleased to inform you that three of the top California entries in this year's Letters About Literature contest were written to you. I'm enclosing copies of these letters, which ranked in the top 200 of over 4,400 California entries this year.

You may recall that Letters About Literature is a national writing contest in which students in grades four through twelve write letters to authors whose books have changed their way of viewing the world and themselves. We coordinate the contest in California and are always thrilled to see the deep connections that kids form with authors like you.

If you happen to want to respond to the letters, we're happy to forward mail or e-mail to students. And if you'd like to know more about the competition and read winning letters from around the country, the national website is www.lettersaboutliterature.org.

Warmest regards,
